Principal's Message

Higher education without employment quality now a days becomes a burden to the society. Higher education must create a strong and benefiting workforce so that it can lead the nation to its optimum target of development. Now a days it is believed that skill development educated along with higher education is the demand of the society. We need education minds along with skilled hands. It is seen that in our society there is lack of even semi skilled person. So many areas are there where persons can be trained along with general education.

Another area of self employment is entrepreneurship Ratuparna Basu (2014) rightly says that in emerging economies such as India, there is an urgent call for the development and promotion of effective indigenous entrepreneurship education system. Although entrepreneurship is a practice driven subject. the need to supplement it with contemporary theoretical knowledge is of paramount importance. "Commerce education should be redesigned so that it can create entrepreneurs both male and female. Involvement of teaching community in this field is of paramount importance. We must support our students so that they show interest in entrepreneurship

From the Editor's Desk

Last year when I was given the charge of editing the newsletter of the college I had somewhat vague plans regarding the arrangement of the content. All I could do was to wait for the days to pass by so that the events and instances could finally attain a tangible form and secure their positions in the line of content for the news letter. I maintained an optimist outlook and knew that the final submission may not be more beautiful but will not certainly be uglier.

As we all know, a news letter mirrors a college-its mission and vision, the activities and events on the academic and extra curricular spheres, and news about the comprehensive functioning of the institution during a session. I have tried to encapsulate the period from August 2015 to June 2016 in this newsletter and have featured all major occasions and happenings. I regret any omission which is unintentional. Voluntary contributions and submission of inputs from all members of the college is desirable.

It is my sincere wish that the faculty and students utilise the newsletter to showcase anything related to themselves and their departments. It would help us to get richer and innovative editions in the future.

I just have two more words to say-happy reading!
